

Cervical cancer is preventable

Every New Year, many women take up resolutions for attaining fitness and becoming healthy. While most of them focus on weight loss, very few decide to set resolutions to go for regular health check-ups and screenings, particularly for preventing cancers which are common among women.

Of all the cancers, cervical cancer is the leading cancer among women, however, it is also the only cancer which is totally preventable if care is taken in the initial stage. Among the many cancers that Indian women succumb to every year, cervical cancer takes the second place after breast cancer.
